

Times Higher Education
Impact Rankings

“SDG3-Good Health and wellbeing”

A delegation from the National Center for Occupational Health and Safety in Basra visited Shatt Al-Arab University College.

A delegation from the National Center for Occupational Health and Safety in Basra visited Shatt al-Arab University College on Sunday, May 15, 2022, to determine the implementation of occupational health and safety requirements within the college and their suitability for the health and safety of workers, where a meeting took place with the Dean of the College (Prof. Dr. Taher Mohsen Mansoor) and discussed the application of occupational health and safety procedures in the college to serve the public interest.

The visiting team undertook an inspection tour throughout the various parts of the college, including lecture halls, laboratories, and other facilities, to determine the extent of implementation of health and safety procedures, as well as to educate them about the dangers of the work environment and spread the culture of occupational health and safety within the college.

Times Higher Education
Impact Rankings

Also, on 13th of September “The Emergency World Company for Medical Services and Health Insurance (WECO)” has set up a training course in first aid for the employees and students of Shatt Al-Arab University College, for the purpose of training cadres on first aid for emergency cases that may occur among students.

